PART 1. READING COMPREHENSION. Maximum: 20 points.

Task 1.1 Read the first part of the story and decide if the statements (1-10) are true (True) or false (False).

Once upon a time there was a little prince who was used to having everything he wanted. He was so spoilt that he wouldn't let anybody have a new toy if he didn't have it first. So, if any child in the land wanted a new toy, they had to buy two and give one to the prince.

One day a mysterious toymaker, who invented the most wonderful toys, came to the land. The prince liked his toys so much that he invited him to spend an entire year in the castle, promising him great wealth if he made him a new toy every day. The toymaker set just one condition:

“My toys are very special and need an owner who will play with them” he said. “Will you be able to devote a little time to each one every day?”

“Of course, I will” the little prince replied impatiently. “I'd love to.”

From then on, every morning the prince received a new toy. Every day it seemed that there could never be a better toy and every day the toymaker delivered a toy better than the previous ones. The prince appeared very happy.

But the toy collection kept growing and, after a few weeks had passed, there were simply too many toys to play with all of them every day. So, one day the prince put a few toys to one side, hoping that the toymaker wouldn't notice. However, when it was night time and the prince was ready to go to bed the toys that had been put away lined up in front of him and, one by one, demanded their daily playtime. The little prince couldn't get to sleep until well past midnight because he had to play with every single toy.

Next day, tired after all his efforts, the prince slept very late. In the little time left of the day, he had to get to know a new toy and then play with all the others too. Once again, he finished very late and was so tired he could hardly stop yawning.

From then on, every day was a little bit worse than the one before. The same amount of time but with one extra toy to play with. The prince was so exhausted and sleepy; he barely had the time to enjoy playing. To make matters worse, the toys were getting angrier and angrier because the time he spent playing with them was becoming shorter and shorter.

1. The prince always liked to share his toys with other children.
2. The toymaker agreed to stay in the castle for twelve months.
3. The toymaker wanted only money for his toys.
4. The toymaker brought his toys to the prince every evening.
5. All the new toys were very good.
6. One day the prince wanted to break his word given to the toymaker.
7. Every day the toymaker brought a new toy and took back an old toy.
8. The prince played with all the new toys alone.
9. Each day the prince became happier and happier with a new toy.
10. The prince's life in the castle with a lot of toys from the toymaker became terrible.

Task 1.2 Read the ending of the story from Task 1. Fill in each gap (11-20) with a word or a phrase from the list below (A-J).

Within a few weeks later, the prince only had time to go from one toy to (11) ..., eating as he played, talking as he played, bathing as he played and (12)... sleeping as he played. He was constantly changing toys, (13)... a terrible nightmare. Until one day, as he was looking (14)... his window, he saw some children playing with a stone next to the castle.

"Hmmm, I have an idea!" he said, and he (15)... for the children. They turned up gloomy, wondering whether he would force them to (16)... their stone, just as he had done many times before with other toys. But the prince didn't want the stone. Surprisingly, he only wanted them to play with him and share his toys. When they'd finished playing the prince (17)... them take home the toys they liked the most.

The idea had worked. The prince could enjoy himself (18)... having too many toys to play with. Even (19)..., he had new friends. From then on, he did the same thing every day and invited more children to the castle to share his toys.

When it was time for the toymaker to leave, the 365 fantastic toys he had made had all been shared out and the palace had turned into the best (20)... in the kingdom.
